

The Interdisciplinary Graduate Student Network (iGSN) has launched INK, a non-academic, student-run journal. INK aims to synergize UBC's interdisciplinary community, empower and democratize knowledge, impact change, and inspire the interdisciplinary spirit.

SUBMIT YOUR PAPER AND BE A PART OF INK!

INK is now accepting articles for its 5th issue.
Submission deadline: JULY 4, 2014..

If you are interested in contributing to INK, please contact us at ubc.cfis.journal.editorial@gmail.com or through our website, www.ink-journal.com. We look forward to receiving your articles, and are happy to answer any questions that you may have!

Please keep your submissions between 750-1000 words, and avoid jargon (your contribution should be understandable without prior knowledge of your field). Guidelines can be found at www.ink-journal.com – “About”.

INK features work from a broad spectrum of disciplines, including the soft- and hard-sciences, through articles that focus on hot topics and controversial issues studied in your realm.

INK occupies a unique niche where creativity builds bridges – students can showcase their work and engage in innovative discussions that address real world problems. We encourage, recognize, and reward passionate students by offering them the opportunity to get published, as well as participate in knowledge translation.
